How can we help?

Healthy, mature trees add value to the landscape. Trees in poor condition add little value and may be a liability because they present a risk to people and property. Regulatory requirements may dictate an evaluation of the tree resources within a proposed development footprint. Where trees are to be preserved, inadequate protection measures during construction will result in significant tree losses.

Whether your goal is assess the value of preserving one tree or a woodlot, UFLLC will provide you with the information you need to make your decision. Services including but not limited to:

- Tree Evaluations and Appraisals - A detailed evaluation of the health and structure of a tree and/or the appraised value of the tree.
- Woodlot Delineations - Identify the footprint of a woodlot as defined by forestry standards or local municipal code.
- Woodlot Quality Assessments - A statistical sample of trees detailing species composition, age, and condition.
- Site Plan Review - Work with project partners to develop a site plan that meets tree preservation and site development objectives.
- Tree Preservation Specifications - Specifications to preserve trees during construction and post construction plant health care measures.

Who may require these services?

- Municipalities
- Engineering Firms
- Property Owners
- Property Managers
